On Monday May 20, 2013 a force 5 tornado tore through Moore Ok. The death toll has changed several times since the first report. The last I saw the toll was 21 with many children dead. The school building that was struck was the school were my cousin Diana's girls had gone to school until a few years ago. (Her oldest graduated from High School this Year)

The damage caused by weather can be devastating (as we here in Edgerton know) and the tornados of Oklahoma are very bad. (I lived through one myself) It is the reaction of Christians to respond when others are in need. We here in this appointment have seen the generosity of others when we have been struck by disaster. As others have helped us we to should help others.

Moore Ok will need a lot of help in rebuilding both the town and the lives that were affected by this tragedy. To donate to this cause you can give to the United Methodist Commission on Relief known as UMCOR.

 WOCUMC
 Attn. Council of Development
 32 Wesley Blvd
 Worthington, Ohio 43085

Advance # 901670

You can give by phone text by texting RESPONSE 80888. $10.00 dollars will be sent to UMCOR

Or through our local church. I want to stress that when giving through UMCOR 100% of the donation goes to those in need. Unlike many other charities UMCOR's overhead is covered by the individual churches of the United Methodist Church through their apportionment giving. NO money sent for donation to help is used for overhead of the charity.

Until next month.
 May God Bless,

Pastor Rick

The Journey's Been Long But the Tide Is About to Change By: Stephanie Reck

Circumstances, trials, crisis, let downs have captured the people of God. Some have succumbed to the hardships of life. Some have even given up hope. While others have lost their faith and doubted God's plans and purposes for their lives. This journey has been long and daunting.

The journey that you have been on has been unrelenting in trials and hardships. You may have even wondered at times what you have done to have such pain. Sometimes you have felt alone on this journey and that you have been misunderstood and even rejected by others closest to you. You have not known which path to take and have even found yourself going in circles or around the same "mountains" again and again. You have tried to express to others how you have felt but it became apparent that you were not being understood. You may have lost all or most of your traveling companions on this journey. Others left because they could no longer figure you out or you realized at some point you were traveling two different journeys.

You may have experienced health ailments and even emotional distress during this time. You asked for prayer and maybe have been standing, waiting for your healing; and you are still waiting. You are not even sure which direction to take anymore. You feel you are in a waiting period, but you seem to still be waiting. Waiting on what you say, "those prayers, promises, healings, restorations, and direction." You have held out and waited as you have seen the desires of your heart upon your enemies.

The moms who have been praying relentlessly for their prodigal to return, the single waiting for their Godly spouse, family members waiting for family relationships to be healed and restored and for the sick waiting to be healed; these are the times to wait and trust a new journey will begin. It is not God's intent to bring tragedy, pain, heartache and suffering for your entire life and you never receive good from the evil or harm that has come into your life.

There will be a day of reckoning, a day of restoration. What have you been holding out on? What are you still believing God for? Or what have you lost hope in? Be honest before the Lord, He already knows your heart. Is there something you have given up on already because the wait became too long? I will encourage you to read the entire chapter of Ruth. Ruth lost everything, husband and two sons and was beyond childbearing age. Her future looked bleak and hopeless. But then, God restored everything back to Ruth.

"And may He be a restorer of life and a nourisher of your old age; for your daughter-in-law, who loves you, who is better to you than seven sons, has borne him." Ruth 4: 15

Ruth waited a long time for things in her life to be restored. I am sure she had no idea how God was bringing these things to pass in her life. You may be in a place where you have hoped and nothing has happened or you did hope for something but it did not last. You may have deep discouragement and be very disillusioned about God. Ruth was so bitter about her circumstances she asked that her name be changed to Mara, which means bitter. What if she would have given up before her life was restored. Keep hoping, keep believing, and keep trusting God is a restorer.

The time has come for many to receive a new direction for your life. There is a new tide that is turning for the people of God who will flow in it. This new direction will not be familiar, you will not have chartered this territory before. It may not look exactly how you planned, but it is exactly what God has planned for you and it is good. It may be difficult to transition over because we like familiar and comfort, but go with the new flow and direction of God; do not stay stuck or you will become stagnant. God has been refining, restoring, correcting, teaching, and now the time has come to embrace a new journey. Don't pick up where you were before. Start fresh, a new, and don't look back, or compare the past to the future.

The tide is about to turn on this very long journey that you have been on. Make sure you are obedient to what Christ tells you and cleanse and repent of all sins. Forgive yourself and forgive others. Embrace the new journey. God is preparing His people, do not be deceived and continue on the journey that the world is taking; stay the course Christ has for you.
